Every day we hear about new technologies. Two-thirds of Americans own a smart phone; many of us have mastered texting, navigating, calendars, checking email and finding information. There is so much more available to us.

Tools are evolving so rapidly that just as I think I’ve mastered one, another replaces it. I think I’m not alone in my frustration when an update is released and familiar navigating tools are rearranged. Most of us who are over 40 don’t find digital navigation to be intuitive, and I know I drive the PSRC help team crazy when I ask for step-by-step instruction, but I’m curious, and I keep trying.

Many are tempted to jump off the tech wagon and return to paper and pencil. I have several friends who found the “digital divide” to be the deciding factor in choosing to retire, as employers implemented a new database, digital record keeping, phone system, etc. And yet, the world keeps changing, with ever more transactions becoming digital, creating a greater potential for leaving people behind.

This year, PSRC’s fall conference is called “Bringing the World to You Through Technology.” We want to introduce you to several tools that can be used to make life easier and help you age in place.

For example:
- Your smart phone is a computer in your pocket. Find out how to download and apps (applications) in everyday life
- Online shopping can help those who no longer drive but want to continue to prepare fresh food at home, or buy a new sweater, or perhaps you want to send a wedding present to your grandson and his partner
- Digital books allow you to read a book on any device. You can check them out from the library from your e-reader or an app on your phone from home or while you’re on vacation.
- Most organization bulletins now arrive electronically; you can increase the font to read them in large-print.
- You probably need to go online to make travel arrangements: air, hotel, car, event registration
- Ride services are increasingly available for door-to-door service for smartphone users
- The internet holds an amazing wealth of information about anything you want to know: What’s the best treatment for the pain in your back? What is the FreeB schedule? How does Medicare rank the rehabilitation facilities in the area? Check our website (princetonsenior.org) for activities each week, the latest helpful Computer Guru article and area resources.

• Streaming and video can bring almost any movie, tv show or music to you when you want. You can invite friends over to watch streamed videos of popular movies, opera performances and Broadway shows.

• There are digital devices that monitor your health, and can even transmit data to a healthcare practitioner. Apps can help you track a wandering loved one, and emergency response buttons can work through your mobile phone when you’re away from home.

• Safe home technologies include smoke and CO2 detectors, night lights that go on when you move, auto-shutoff for stoves, door monitors and more.

We know that isolation and loneliness are increasing risks with age and reduced mobility. Technology can keep us connected across town or at a distance. I find that Skype video calls with my sons make me feel much more connected than phone calls, and Facebook is great for staying connected with family, friends, communities (and funny videos.) Learn about interesting subjects through TED talks. Caregivers can connect to online support groups they can access at any time of day or night and find lots of other helpful information.

PSRC is dedicated to improving your awareness and comfort with using technology. We hope you’ll attend the conference, sign up for free computer classes, and bring your device for one-to-one help in our computer lab.

I’ve been a volunteer in the PSRC computer lab for about four years. It keeps me off the streets, though I admit downtown Plainsboro is fairly docile at night. Besides, as a senior, I get sleepy at 8 p.m.

Also, I enjoy helping folks of any age use their smart phones, tablets, and computers. Of all the inventions during my lifetime, nothing compares to the transformation of information and communications from analog to digital—from paper to disk, from wires to fiber optic cables, from the TV in a wooden box that sits on the floor to a flat screen that hangs on the wall, from the wired phone on your desk to the wireless phone in your pocket. I still enjoy holding a physical book and flipping through my glossy Astronomy magazine, but for pure knowledge power, the Internet’s immense store of information and speed-of-light delivery to any computer or mobile device anywhere in the world is without equal.

In his seminal book, The World is Flat, now in its third revision, author Thomas Friedman explains that digital technology allows us to “…reach farther, faster, deeper, and cheaper than ever before… giving so many people the tools and ability to connect, compete, and collaborate.” Indeed, if we don’t bring computers (or tablets or smart phones) into our day-to-day lives, we’ll be left in the dust because everyone else in the world is online—talking, texting, and Tweeting. The Internet and digital technology has replaced the “dial” telephone with the smart phone, including video. Remember the AT&T PicturePhone from the 1960s? Your smart phone can do that today—for free!

Now, some folks tell me they don’t believe in texting, or don’t like E-mail, or reading news from a computer or tablet. But the point is that most everyone else does—including your family. That’s how your children and grandchildren communicate and learn about the world. If you’re waiting for them to call you or send you photos of their vacation in the mail, forget it. Cameras don’t use film. The pictures of your niece or nephew are available on Facebook. They’ll text you. You can always call them.

Google lets you search myriad information sources about any subject imaginable. YouTube provides millions of videos that range from aardvarks to zithers, Ansel Adams to Picasso, Beethoven to Beyoncé, live “streams” of press conferences and programs, and how to take apart your toaster. (Step 1: Unplug your toaster.) Study Botticelli’s “Venus on the Half-shell” at the Uffizi Gallery in Florence (Italy, not New Jersey) on your laptop, or sign up for university lectures through Coursera—for free!

Most newspapers and magazines offer on-line versions that include videos and narration (“The Economist” can read itself to you.) The New York Times and Wall Street Journal update their digital content throughout the day, and include videos and graphics not available in their newsprint versions. PBS Newshour is available on YouTube. The range of on-line news, opinions, and facts at your fingertips is orders of magnitude greater than anything that’s ever been available. (Anyone want to buy my 1980’s edition of World Book? How about my 1973 World Almanac?)

McCaffrey’s is bringing on-line grocery shopping to its stores. Amazon.com, which is actually a marketplace, sells thousands of items from thousands of manufacturers, and delivers them to you—sometimes the same day. If you want to shop at the Quakerbridge Mall, you can summon a ride from Uber or Lyft from your smart phone.

There’s no need to mail paper checks when your bank provides an on-line bill-pay service—for free! I’ve been doing this for the last 20 years.

Our parents welcomed radio in the 1920s, dial telephones in the 1930s, and televisions in the 1950s. Now it’s our turn to welcome the digital world. Talk about lifelong learning! I love it.

If you need help with your laptop, tablet, mobile phone, or camera, stop by PSRC’s computer lab on Tuesdays from 1:00 to 4:00 p.m., Wednesdays from 1:30 to 4:00 p.m. and Fridays from 10:00 a.m. to 12 noon.
There are no fees for any of these groups.

Retirement follows the pattern of all major transitions in life, but it is one without a road map. In other life transitions, such as the pursuit of a higher education, career advancement, or marriage, there’s a general, more or less predictable, course of action.

For example, in the pursuit of a college degree, the potential student visits colleges, completes the application process, is accepted, goes through the orientation phase, completes the course requirements for the chosen degree and graduates with the degree in hand. Making the transition to retirement, on the other hand, is not so obvious and is often filled with unforeseen challenges without a clear way to resolve them.

In a typical retirement scenario, a pattern unfolds: At the outset, the individual is thrilled at the prospect of having the freedom to pursue whatever course she or he chooses, without the confines of a job. One is free go to bed late, sleep late, play golf whenever one likes, pursue any and all interests, etc. This might be considered the “Honeymoon” phase of retirement and, as with all honeymoons, it doesn't last.

At some point, feelings of uncertainty, confusion, and dissatisfaction begin to appear. The novelty of retirement has worn off and is replaced by the question “Who am I?” a question previously self-defined by aspects of the person’s career. The retiree has now entered what is considered the Exploration phase, in which she or he attempts to answer the question “Who am I now?” and it is at this point that the lack of a road map becomes obvious.

How does one answer the “Who am I now?” question? The answer: PSRC’s Transition to Retirement group.

The Transition to Retirement group addresses many types of issues that can arise during the Exploration phase, and assists group members in navigating this phase, enabling them to the begin to answer the “Who am I now?” question.

The group meets the third Friday of the month at 3:00 p.m. at the Suzanne Patterson Building and is facilitated by John George, PhD, licensed psychologist, and Dave Roussell, MSEd, MSW, LSW, PSRC's Care Coordinator and HomeFriends Coordinator. All are welcome.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 28TH IS GIVING TUESDAY:
The concept was created when two organizations, the 92nd Street Y and the United Nations Foundation came together in 2012, about a month before that year's Thanksgiving. Their intention was to set aside a day that is all about celebrating the generosity of giving, a great American tradition.
This year, Giving Tuesday is after Thanksgiving, just in time to jumpstart your holiday giving!
On November 28th, just go to our website and click on the #GivingTuesday icon to make your donation.

Thank you so much to Jersey Cares and Dental Care of Princeton for donating their time to make Spruce Circle flower beds beautiful. They have provided a large assortment of Fall mums for the gardens and plan to work with Princeton Housing Authority to spread the mulch! In addition, they donated miscellaneous supplies to assemble Blizzards Bags for the Spruce residents. The bags include non-perishable foods to safely shelter in place in the event that there is a loss of electricity.

Ellen Pretz (L) and Wendy Lodge (R) are interns in PSRC’s GrandPals program, learning the ropes now, alongside longtime program leaders Olivian Boon and Sallie Meade, in preparation to assume leadership of the program next year. Ellen was the director of a pre-school and Wendy was an elementary teacher at Littlebrook School.

We’re so happy to welcome them to the team!
