I was just starting to write my monthly message on ageism when I got a link to the current Aging Insights video from the NJ Foundation for Aging and a recommendation from a friend to read This Chair Rocks by Ashton Applewhite (or see her TED talk), both on ageism. So, the time is right.

Ageism is any discrimination based on age, blatant or indirect. It can impact any person at any age. Ageism relegates older people to second class citizenship as well as disrespecting youth. Discrimination legitimizes and sustains inequalities between groups and is imparted to us from an early age.

Why is ageism still an acceptable form of discrimination? Certainly no one would lump everyone age 20–70 in the same group, so why those 50–100? Growing old has become shameful; we blame ourselves for an array of circumstances beyond our control and dread our futures. Ageism legitimizes abuse.

We have all experienced it:
• A doctor says, “you are just getting older” and doesn’t give full attention to your concerns.
• A job interviewer does not value your years of experience, if you even get an interview.
• You hear comments about someone being “too old” to run for office.
• Walk through a pharmacy and check out the “anti-aging” aisle.
• People send you “old folk’s jokes” that emphasize disability, incontinence, loss of memory, and other functions. If you doubt this, check the birthday card collection at your pharmacy and see how the message changes at the 30th birthday.

What happens when we substitute another protected class of people for the ageist language in these jokes? “Did you hear about the woman who…” “How many gay men…” Most of these jokes would set off alarms that these messages are unacceptable.

Media messages often divide perception of older people into either old and a threat/burden on society (“silver tsunami”) or as super-agers (still running a marathon at 90). Images are often sanitized or romanticized. Neither of those describe most of us. Only recently have advertisers and entertainment media started to feature older people as having normal lives. Ageist ideas like these have a negative impact on people’s willingness to work with older people.

We even turn ageism on ourselves. Have you found yourself purchasing wrinkle cream, avoiding a store or exercise class because you judge it to be for people younger than yourself, or meeting someone your own age and thinking “I’m glad I don’t look/act that old?” Internalizing these negative stereotypes impacts our health, wellness, and longevity.

It is time to change this form of discrimination. There is a group called the Radical Age Movement, with a chapter in NJ, whose goal is to “end the misperceptions and skewed attitudes toward aging so that people of all ages, races, classes, genders, and sexualities can participate productively in areas of cultural, professional, and community life.” This goal is good for all society.

What can you do?
• The first step is awareness: watch for ageism around you
• Look for ways you are ageist and find ways to change your thinking — for example:
  o Don’t use terms like “still” as in “still driving” or “you look good for your age”
  o Don’t use adjectives you wouldn’t use for a younger person o Don’t say “If I get like that”
  o Don’t refer to “the elderly” — try simply “people” or “older adults”
  o Don’t send or respond to ageist jokes
• Tell the truth when asked your age
• Find opportunities to share positive stories with others
• Look for beauty in older faces and bodies
• Assume capacity not incapacity
• Speak up when you hear others use ageist language and behavior. Ask “what do you mean,” then listen, then help the speaker understand how it sounds.

Operating System Updates and Security Patches

Microsoft and Apple roll out new editions of their operating systems ("OS") each fall that include new features, improved reliability, and better security. They also issue minor updates—sometimes called “patches”—throughout the year that fix minor bugs, and obscure, but potentially harmful, security flaws that users report to Microsoft and Apple. And that’s why it’s important (as in REALLY important) that your computers and mobile devices are running the latest OS edition available, and that you install patches as soon as they’re issued.

Same “Look and Feel”

Windows, MacOS, iOS, and Android operating systems are mature, stable, and consistent from year to year. Changes to the “user interface”—the look and feel—are mostly subtle. Your icons and folders won’t change, and you won’t lose any data. New “dark mode” settings can be easier on the eyes. Improvements to Edge and Safari make web browsing quicker and easier. Under the hood, these new OS editions keep your data more secure, improve file handling efficiency, and help ensure you are actually the person using your computer.

This table lists the current operating systems as of October 2, 2018:

Windows, MacOS, iOS 12, can be set to update automatically, which is a jim-dandy idea. Google updates some parts of Android automatically, but major edition updates are managed by the device maker (e.g., Samsung, LG, etc.)

If you need help figuring out which operating system you have, or need help with any of these apps, visit our Technology Lab on Tuesdays from 1:00 to 4:00 p.m., Wednesdays from 1:00 to 4:00 p.m., or Fridays from 10:00 a.m. until 1:00 p.m.

SUPPORT & GUIDANCE

Emergency Preparedness

Create an emergency kit that has a supply of food and other items in stock in the event of stormy weather and loss of power. Make an effort to choose foods that do not require refrigeration, have long shelf lives, and need no electricity to open or prepare. We also recommend that you consider locating your flashlight and buying new batteries.

Even though Princeton and New Jersey have emergency plans, it is important to assess your own ability to “shelter in place” (without power) for several days. With lessons learned from previous storms and severe weather conditions, we are listing some government recommendations on managing during emergencies.

- Lifeline does not work if the landline phone system is not functioning so please have a current list of emergency phone numbers and make arrangements, prior to an emergency, for a support network to immediately check on you after a disaster and offer assistance.
- If you take medication or use a medical treatment on a daily basis, be sure you have what you need to make it on your own for at least a week.
- People who rely on medical devices that use electricity (such as c-pap machines or oxygen tanks) to breathe should discuss with their doctors what to do in the event of a power outage.
- Cell phones have limited battery life and should be reserved for emergency calls in the absence of a mechanism to recharge them. Keep cell phones fully charged at all times — before the storm arrives.

By evaluating your own personal needs and making an emergency plan that fits those needs, you and your loved ones can be better prepared.

If you need immediate assistance during an emergency call 911. If your need is not critical call Access Princeton at 609.924.4141. We also advise you to sign up for an emergency notification system. Access Princeton or PSRC can assist if you need help.

As we approach the end of the year, PSRC is now focusing on our Annual Appeal drive. PSRC, a non-profit organization, is sustained largely by donor support. Almost half of our total operating budget comes from individual donations in support of our programs and services:

3924 Support & Guidance Contacts Last Year
578 Support & Social Group Participants
124 Received Assistance with Taxes, Medicare, & Emergency Blizzard Bag
502 People Attended Education and Enrichment — art, writing, technology
1156 People Attended Evergreen Forum
178 People Attended Fitness — yoga, table tennis, aerobics
376 Volunteers

Your annual appeal gifts enable us to offer a wide variety of opportunities for aging adults and their families including first-rate social services, lifelong learning classes and programs, art and exercise classes, and a myriad of other stimulating activities every month. At this time, we appeal to you to make a gift in support of our work providing these essential resources to our community.

Please give as generously as you can!

There are so many ways to give:

• Make an HONORARY OR MEMORIAL GIFT in someone’s name
• MONTHLY SUSTAINING GIFTS
• DESIGNATE PSRC AS A BENEFICIARY ON A LIFE INSURANCE POLICY
• PLANNED GIVING

• IRA DISTRIBUTION & GIFTS OF STOCK

Do you still need to take a required minimum distribution from your IRA?

In 2015 federal legislation made IRA rollovers permanently available to individuals over 70½.

You can make a charitable donation directly from your qualified minimum IRA distribution. Because IRA assets can be among the most highly taxed, they make very effective donations. The donor will not pay federal income tax on these gifts, unlike other IRA distributions. Please speak with your financial advisor about making any distributions to benefit PSRC.

These may have significant tax advantages for you or your family.
