

Theatre Appreciation, from Page to Stage

Theatre Appreciation, from Page to Stage will walk students through the play development process from beginning to end. Students will better understand the duties of the people who work both on and offstage to create a piece of theatre, while also learning about different techniques that are used when making new work. Students will be asked to read two plays in their entirety, plus a few handouts, in order to better understand different theatrical forms. In-class group projects and short videos will also help the student to better understand the theatrical process.

Texts Read/Discussed:

Students will be asked to read the play Morir Sonyando by Erlina Ortiz (which will be provided) and The Laramie Project by Moisés Kaufman and Members of Tectonic Theater Project (available on Amazon for $7.79). Students should also be familiar with the plot of Hamlet by William Shakespeare (any version will do).

What to Expect:

If you have an interest in theatre, or ever wanted to know more about the craft, this class is for you! This is NOT a performance or acting class, but rather a class about what happens before and after the actors rehearse! Playwrights are writing, directors are analyzing, designers are sketching, and stage managers are taking careful notes about it all. There will be a lot of discussion about how a play functions and how we bring all of the moving parts together to make one really great piece of art.

Leader: Ryanne Domingues became the Artistic Director of Passage Theatre in 2017. She has worked for a number of theatres on both the East and West Coasts, including The Wilma Theater, InterAct Theatre Company, Plays & Players Theatre, South Coast Repertory, California Shakespeare Theater, and Utah Shakespeare Festival. She also co-founded and served as the Producing Artistic Director of Philadelphia's Simpatico Theatre from 2004-2010. Ryanne has also directed for a number of universities including LaSalle, Bloomsburg, and most recently, Princeton's Triangle Show. Ryanne received her MFA in Directing from the University of California, Irvine. Next up, she will be directing Morir Sonyando for Passage before heading into rehearsals for the musical Assistants!, which will perform off-Broadway this June.
