ART EXHIBITION & RECEPTION
Wednesday, April 3, 4:00–5:30 p.m.
Stop by to celebrate the creative talents of PSRC’s art students.
The exhibition will run April 3 to April 30
I stood in the parking lot in disbelief. The signboard in front of our favorite restaurant—the place where, for the last 15 years, we have celebrated anniversaries, birthdays, graduations, and other special family celebrations—was closed. I walked to the door to check for myself and was greeted by a sign that read simply, “Retired and moved south. Thank you for the memories!” I think I went through the stages of grief as I stood in the parking lot wondering why no one even bothered to call me.

I called Diane, my wife, to let her know the bad news as I drove home. As she often does, she provided a more balanced perspective and checked my reaction. “Do you think,” she offered, “maybe your reaction to the restaurant closing has more to do with all of the other transitions going on in our life?” Gaining clarity and perspective from our conversation, I began to think back on the past year: the sudden death of my oldest brother, the death of my mother following an extended battle with cancer, the newly discovered “empty nest” with our youngest daughter starting college, the beginning of a new job, and moving to a new community. I was exhausted just thinking about all of the change and transition we have experienced this year.

I’m sure that many of you can relate to this experience. Moving to a new community. Entering a new phase of life in retirement. Losing someone close to you. Being a caretaker—or the experience of needing more care yourself. In my experience, I have found that these changes, while difficult, can also bring opportunities for new joys to be discovered. A few years ago, I came across a quote from Alan Watts: “The only way to make sense out of change is to plunge into it, move with it, and join the dance.”

So, I have been preparing to “plunge” into the new opportunities that life is bringing my way and “dance” my way into new possibilities. Over the last few months we have been trying lots of new restaurants to discover a new home for our family celebrations. Diane and I have come to enjoy the empty nest—taking time to go to the theater, enjoy concerts, see live sporting events (who doesn't love a good Phillies/Eagles/Flyers/Sixers game?). And, I am preparing to jump in to my new journey with the Princeton Senior Resource Center.

I am incredibly thankful to Susan Hoskins and the legacy that she leaves at PSRC. She has been a gift to this organization and I know
Planning to Live to 100? Volunteer!¹

Donating one’s time to benefit others has deep individual value. A growing body of research tells us that those who volunteer have lower mortality rates and less depression, along with a greater sense of control over one’s life and higher rates of self-esteem and happiness. Using health and volunteering data from the U.S. Census Bureau and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, one report found that states with a high volunteer rate even have lower incidences of heart disease. Some studies showed that volunteers who devote about 100 hours or more per year to volunteer activities are the most likely to experience health benefits.

My HomePods

For the last few months, I’ve been using two Apple HomePods in our living and family rooms to play music¹, but they can do much more, as I’ll explain.

You can think of a HomePod as a squat round computer with a microphone and speaker, but no screen or keypad. It connects to the Internet via your wi-fi network, and you tell the device what to do using Siri, which is Apple’s personal assistant. (The Echo uses Alexa.)

For example, if I want to hear songs by Acoustic Alchemy from my Apple music collection, I say, “Hey Siri, play Acoustic Alchemy,” and she (or he, depending on the gender you assign Siri) will play songs from my favorite smooth jazz band. I can tell Siri to increase or decrease the volume (“Hey Siri, turn up the music”), but I can also adjust the loudness from my iPad, iPhone, or Mac laptop because the HomePods integrate with my other Apple devices.

My two HomePods aren’t connected to each other; rather, they’re separate devices with access to the internet via our wi-fi network. I can play the Rolling Stones on my family room HomePod and Beethoven in the living room.

I can ask my HomePod to “Play WNYC” to hear New York’s NPR station via their streaming services. Or “Play Car Talk” to listen to Click and Clack help folks diagnose the strange sound coming from the engine compartment of their 1992 Yugo.²

“Hey Siri, Call PSRC” turns my HomePod into a speaker phone that calls the senior center, which is stored in my contacts list. I can call our son in Washington from my iPhone and transfer the call to my HomePod so my wife can talk as well. Same for text messages: “Hey Siri, send a message: Tell [insert your spouse’s name here] that I’m on my way home.”

Finally, I can use my HomePod to turn on various “smart” lights in the house. I only have a couple of these, but they are pretty neat. “Hey Siri, turn on the deck lights.”

Now, I can do all these things from my iPad or iPhone. (You would use Alexa on an Android device.) But the HomePod has a fantastic speaker. I’m just amazed that such a small device (about the size of a #10-size can of cling peaches³) sounds so good!

But maybe more important are the accessibility features of the HomePod (or Echo) for those of us who need help using the phone or sending a text. Siri understands a plethora of commands, and I’ve never heard her complain that I was a pain in the tuchis. At least not to my face.

If you need help selecting a “smart” speaker or want to try Siri or Alexa, just stop by the Technology Lab on Tuesdays or Wednesdays from 1:00 to 4:00 p.m. or Fridays from 10:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m.

¹ The HomePod is similar to the Amazon Echo, but I’m writing about the HomePod because that’s what I have.
² It’s the engine.
³ Or stewed tomatoes. Roughly 7” tall and 6” wide.
Healthy Aging: Can Volunteering Help?

Healthy aging can be defined as caring for the “whole” person in a way that includes the physical, mental, and financial areas of an individual’s life. Seniors can experience “social isolation” when their connections to family, friends, and activities/work change. It may be necessary to re-define what it means to be retired once a senior starts to experience the amount of free time available. Volunteering can be an important component of maintaining social connections as retirees age. In addition to the social aspect, volunteers often experience a new sense of energy by giving their time and sharing their talents for a cause they find meaningful.

How do you decide where and when to volunteer? What questions should you ask yourself? Start with these:

• How much time do you want to devote to doing community service/volunteering? Do you want a regular schedule or an occasional opportunity?
• What would make you smile? You may be skilled at something specific but that doesn’t necessarily mean that you want to use those skills in your volunteer service.
• Have you asked your friends/family where they like to volunteer?
• Are you prepared to interview for the volunteer position and have a background check run?
• Does your passion align with the organization's mission?
• Do you want to learn a new skill?

You will have to do some searching to find the right fit. Volunteering with a friend can be enjoyable but you may prefer to “go it alone” so you will be able to make new friends more readily. Volunteering on a weekly basis can play an important role in healthy aging. There are valuable resources for helping you find the right volunteer experience.

Here are a few options: Volunteer Match (volunteermatch.org), Idealist (idealist.org), Create the Good (createthegood.org), Jersey
Cares (jerseycares.org). You can also go directly to a non-profit’s website to view volunteer opportunities. See PSRC’s volunteer page at princetonsenior.org/volunteer.

Opportunities are available that combine several quality of life issues during one experience. A great example would be the PSRC Knit Wits group (see photo on p. 8). These people gather together several times a month at Spruce Circle to work on their knitting and crocheting projects. Most of the completed items are donated to local charities of choice. During the gathering people usually share their stories and help in problem solving issues of all kinds. Many friendships have formed outside the Knit Wits group. PSRC has had yarn donated by many corporations, so if you are knitting for charity you may just find the yarn you need at the group.

National Volunteer Week is April 7–13, 2019. PSRC is so grateful for all the volunteers that continue to help us thrive! PSRC has volunteer opportunities throughout the year, especially when there is a special event planned. If you would like more information about volunteering, please contact Sharon Hurley, CVA at shurley@princetonsenior.org or 609.252.2362.

CARS DONATION

Maurice and Iona Harding have participated in numerous programs through PSRC, including Men in Retirement group, Evergreen Forum courses, Feldenkrais, and others. When they wanted to get rid of one of their cars, Maurice remembered hearing about the CARS Donation Program at PSRC’s 2018 Fall Conference workshop on taxes. It was a win-win. The car was taken away, the Hardings got a tax-deductible donation, and PSRC received the proceeds!

“The donation process was pretty straight forward, with all the details worked out in a phone call to the number we saw in the PSRC Newsletter and on the website. We love PSRC and appreciate all it has to offer this community. This was an easy and mutually beneficial way to donate something we no longer needed and to have it benefit the Center.”

All of us at PSRC want to thank the Hardings for their thoughtful and generous donation, and are here to help others interested in learning more about donating an unwanted automobile or boat.

Donate your car or boat — Call 855.500.7433 or 855.500.RIDE or visit: careasy.org/nonprofit/Princeton-Senior-Resource-Center.

BEQUESTS — If you have included PSRC in your estate planning, THANK YOU! Please let us know so we can enroll you in the Jocelyn and Carl Helm Legacy Society. If you would like more information about how to make a bequest to PSRC, please contact Barbara Prince at 609.924.7108, or by email to request a brochure at bprince@princetonsenior.org.
