

Landscapes in Art

Join six docents from the Princeton University Art Museum as they explore with you various aspects of landscape painting through the ages. Each week will focus on a different topic and will include (but not be limited to) landscapes, seascapes and flowers as seen in European and American paintings as well as Japanese and Chinese scrolls. The course takes place in the Princeton University Art Museum and consists of an hour of interactive lecture and an hour of small group activity. The groups will look closely at a small number of different art works, sharing their individual perspectives.

Leader: Sandy Kurinsky has retired from a 25+ year business career. One of her activities since then has been serving as a docent at the Princeton University Art Museum.

Fridays: 10:00 a.m. to noon, 6 weeks: October 11 through November 15

Location: Princeton University Art Museum, Maximum 20 seats