SYMPOSIUM ON RACE
TWO THURSDAYS:
AUGUST 13 & AUGUST 20
AT 1:00 P.M.

Join us as we open the conversation on race in America. On Thursday, August 13, Rachel Apter, director of NJ Civil Rights Division, and her chief of staff, Aarin Williams, will lay the groundwork to define and differentiate systemic and systematic racism.

On Thursday, August 20, Dr. Gilbert Caldwell, a retired United Methodist Church minister who joined Dr. Martin Luther King during the 1963 march on Washington, and a panel of millennials, will discuss the similarities and differences between protesting today and marching in 1963.

Dear Friends,

Since the early days of the Covid-19 crisis, I have become even more keenly aware of the deep compassion and care that runs through our community. I have been moved by the commitment of individuals and community organizations to come together to meet the needs that have arisen, or more accurately the needs that have come into focus, during this pandemic. As we have experienced in other times of trouble, the inherent goodness of humanity is on display as neighbor reaches out to neighbor to lend a helping hand.

At the Princeton Senior Resource Center, we are deeply grateful for the ways that the community has responded to the needs of older adults who are particularly vulnerable to this virus. Volunteers have made wellness calls, provided programming and social engagement, delivered groceries and other supplies, and so much more. In a very difficult season, the compassion of our community has been inspiring.

In her powerful TED Talk from 2008, “My Wish: The Charter for Compassion,” world religion scholar Karen Armstrong notes that the work of compassion involves “dethroning ourselves from the center of our lives and putting another person there.” Cutting across all of the world religions, she argues, the value of compassion and the act of centering others is central to healthy living. She goes on to say that those who are working to create compassionate communities are moved through empathy to compassionate action — a desire to address pain and suffering wherever it occurs.
Certainly, we have witnessed pain and suffering in our community, across the nation, and around the world in an acute way over the past few months. As of the writing of this article, over 130,000 people in the United States and more than 550,000 around the world have lost their lives to Covid-19. There has been a new awakening to the struggle for justice in the black community — nationally and globally — following several instances of police brutality against people of color. Anti-Semitism is given new voice by athletes, creating more harm and threat to the Jewish community. The economic impact of a global pandemic has left millions hungry and unemployed. And new acts of violence against LGBTQIA+ persons often get too easily swept aside.

With so much pain to bear, the temptation is to “look away” or attempt to move forward rather than be overwhelmed. Psychologists speak of “compassion fatigue” as the feeling of numbness or the paralysis of inaction that comes when one is exposed to seemingly endless stories of pain and suffering. Rather than succumbing to these temptations, however, I’d like to encourage you to look deeply into the face of these challenges and commit to one small act that can make a huge impact.

For example, one friend of mine became overwhelmed with the racial injustice inherent in our criminal justice system. She made a firm commitment to learn and absorb information, through reading books like The New Jim Crow by Michelle Alexander and listening to podcasts such as Don Lemon’s new Silence is Not an Option. She has also committed to writing one letter or email per month to one of her government representatives encouraging (or challenging) their work (or lack of) on criminal justice reform.

Another friend writes a handwritten letter to someone battling depression through the organization Letters Against Depression. These letters serve as a source of encouragement and hope to people across the world who simply need to hear a message that they have value and worth — and that there is someone out there with support and a message of love. You can learn more about this small organization and volunteer to write letters at www.lettersagainst.org/volunteer.

There are several opportunities forthcoming, including our Symposium on Race put together by our program associate Breana Newton, that may give you some concrete ways to contribute to the work of compassion and justice.

So what might you do? How might you act? What small step can you take that will contribute to the compassionate fabric of our community? Remember the words of Amelia Earhart: “A single act of kindness throws out roots in all directions, and the roots spring up and make new trees.” In a world that too often feels dry and barren, let’s start a forest full of compassion and kindness.

All the Best,
Drew A. Dyson, PhD
Executive Director

MEN IN RETIREMENT — NOT MEETING IN AUGUST

WOMEN IN RETIREMENT — “TRAVEL TALKS”
Friday, August 21 at 10:00 a.m.
While we’re not able to travel ourselves right now, let’s join WIR members as they share their adventures to faraway places. This month’s meeting is a reprise of our popular “Travel Talks” series but with an emphasis on people and experiences that have left lasting impressions on us. All are welcome.

TRANSITION TO RETIREMENT — ON HIATUS IN AUGUST

LIMITED SERIES PROGRAMS

FRENCH THROUGH PAINTINGS — CANCELLED
Tuesday, August 11 at 2:30 p.m.
Rather than relying on traditional textbooks, students will be introduced to different levels of vocabulary by discussing paintings. Before the beginning of the class, participants will receive links to selected paintings. This one-time course is intended for participants with a good knowledge of the French language. Limited to 12 participants. Instructor: Brigitte Aflalo-Calderon. Registration required, no fee.

DISCOVERING MICHELLE OBAMA — FIVE-SESSIONS
Mondays in August & September, beginning August 10 to September 14 (no class 9/7), 11:00 a.m.
It was so popular; we’re offering another session. Join us to read and then discuss Michelle Obama’s celebrated book, Becoming. An intimate, powerful, and inspiring memoir by the former First Lady of the United States. Our last session will be a watch party of the entertaining and moving documentary of Obama’s book tour journey. Leader: Helen Burton. Registration required, no fee.

MUSIC & CONVERSATION — THREE-SESSIONS
August 4, 6, and 12, 3:00–4:00 p.m.
PSRC is collaborating with Princeton Mutual Aid, a local mutual aid group, to bring you a series of mini-Zoom concerts hosted by local Princeton musicians. These concerts are intended to be like cocktail hours, featuring two or three local musicians and plenty of conversation. Musicians will play a range of musical genres. Limited to 20 participants. Registration required, no fee.

SPECIAL NOTICE
In observance of the Labor Day Holiday, PSRC will be closed on Monday, September 7.

11th Annual Backpack and School Supplies Drive!
Deadline to drop off donations is Friday, August 7

The Princeton Human Services Commission, Princeton University, municipal employees, local businesses, organizations, and residents donate book bags and school supplies to benefit many Princeton children. The items are distributed to children from low-income families who attend the Princeton Public Schools and are entering kindergarten through sixth grade.

To participate, you may drop off donations in the donation box outside of the Monument Hall building located at 45 Stockton Street. You may choose to donate book-bags, or school supplies, or both! See flyer for a list of needed supplies at princetonsenior.org/wp-content/uploads/2020/07/Backpack-Flyer-2020-Donors.pdf.
The Evergreen Forum uses a first-come, first-served registration system. Registration will open on Tuesday, August 4 at 9:30 a.m. Reminder – all courses will be held on the video conferencing platform, Zoom. Registration for a second or more courses will open on August 18. To register, go to princetonsenior.org. Telephone and mail applications will not be accepted. Waitlists: If a class is full, registrants are encouraged to put their name on the online waitlist. Fees are $95 for a 6 to 8 week course, and $70 for a 3 to 5 week course. Cost should never be a barrier to learning! Senior Scholarships are available to those for whom the fee is a hardship.

Then call Ride Provide at 609.452.5144 to schedule a ride. Free to Penn Medicine Princeton Health (hospital) and medically prescribed rehabilitation at Princeton Fitness and Wellness Center.
Is It Time to Cut the Cable?

Fall 2017, I penned (typed) an article about YouTube, which brings you a world of videos, from thought-provoking (Intelligence Squared discussions) to informative (PBS NewsHour) to joyful (Gorilla Babies), and everything in between.

YouTube is called a “streaming service,” because you watch the video as it’s delivered (streamed) via the internet from YouTube’s servers to your computer (or tablet or “smart” TV). You can select exactly which video to watch when you want to watch it. And it’s free.

Now, we’ve been cable TV subscribers for thirty-five years, and our collection of TV gear includes a digital video recorder (DVR) and three set-top boxes around the house that offer 315 channels, of which we watch four. (I used to watch the Dryer Channel—especially calming after a long day at the Technology Lab.)

We also pay Verizon for internet and phone service—a so-called “triple-play” package—all for $225/month. Last year, we subscribed to Netflix and HBO—Now, both premium streaming services that aren’t part of our Verizon package, but that we can watch on any device—computer, tablet, or TV with an inexpensive “streaming device.”

Recently, YouTube began selling a new streaming service called YouTube TV for $40/month, which includes live, local TV station broadcasts, and a few dozen “cable” channels, such as MSNBC, Fox News, ESPN, and so on. And that’s a game changer, because you only need internet service—not TV program service—to watch “TV” on ANY device in your home. YouTube TV also lets you save programs on its servers to watch at your convenience—like a virtual DVR.

I wanted to get rid of all my Verizon gear, most of the 315 channels, and button-bound remotes and use a streaming service, but YouTube TV doesn’t offer (for now) HGTV, which my wife likes.

When Hulu TV began offering TV service ($40/month—a coincidence? I think not.) that includes HGTV, we decided it was time to take the bold step and drop our TV service in favor of a dual package of insanely high-speed (gigabit) internet service plus phone for $145/month. (The phone service is only $10). My smart TV has Hulu built in, and by adding three Roku streaming devices for $30 each to our other TVs, we can now watch anything we want on any TV, tablet, or computer. The DVR, cable boxes, 315 channels, and remotes went back to Verizon.

Hulu TV lets you set up individual “profiles” for your family members allowing them to select the channels and programs they like to watch. The remote controls (either for a smart TV or streaming device like Apple TV or Roku) are simple. And you can watch anything—live or recorded—on any device, even when you’re out of town, as long as you have internet service. TV in bed? Not a problem—just grab your smart phone along with your Teddy Bear (or spouse). On a boat or with a goat? Here, There, and Everywhere? Sure.

Are we saving any money? Not much—maybe $20 a month—because triple-pay packages offer discounts on the individual services, and when you unbundle them, the separate services are more expensive. YouTube TV and Hulu have fine-tuned their monthly costs to be competitive, but only a bit, and I had to pay Hulu another $15/month to allow us to skip recorded commercials. Bummer.

That said, cable providers are losing TV customers who have discovered streaming services, so this isn’t a passing fancy. But there’s no rush, either. I’m confident that streaming services will offer more channels and conveniences in the months and years to come, and we’ll all learn more.

For additional information on streaming services, pick up a copy of the August 2018 edition of Consumer Reports, “Dear Cable TV, You’re Fired!”

If you need technical help, please contact us at princetonsenior.org/psrc-tech-resources/.

1 Smart TVs allow you to install “apps” such as YouTube, or Hulu, or HBO-Now, like a tablet or smart phone. You can make most any TV into a smart TV by adding an inexpensive streaming device such as a Roku, Amazon FireTV, or Apple TV.
The past few months I have found myself experiencing an array of different emotions within a day, perhaps even an hour: At times, I’ve felt fear, anxiety, sadness, short-temperedness, and impatience. But I’ve also felt moments of calmness, even joy. And I ask myself: Is this normal? What is normal, anyway?

Then I think about the fact that we are currently living during a time that is completely unprecedented and uncertain, and that there is no “right” or “wrong” way to feel. I am reminded of a tenet of mindfulness: the importance of allowing yourself to experience the emotion, whatever it may be, without judgement or question, and to sit with it for a moment. You don’t have to squash it, repress it, or deny it, but instead, you should just feel it, knowing it will pass, as it usually does.

However, it may not; that is okay, too, and it’s important to acknowledge this. Early warning signs of what might indicate that you are not okay and could benefit from external assistance can include more than occasional restlessness or sleeplessness, increasing reliance on unhealthy coping mechanisms such as food, alcohol, or drugs, or excessive withdrawal from normal routines and activities.

No one knows you better than you know yourself, so if you feel out of balance, or find that these warning symptoms apply to you, or find yourself struggling in other ways, please know that you are not alone. We at PSRC are here for you, to listen to your fears, concerns, and joys, and to provide you with support and resources. Check out our Virtual Programs Calendar and Social Services Resources webpage on the PSRC website, as both include many ways you can connect virtually in the current pandemic until the center re-opens.

For example, the center’s FYI Seminars have been keeping us learning and connected to our community at large, even as we are isolated at home, and our popular online exercise programs—including chair yoga—can help keep you moving throughout the day. This simple adjustment has been proven to help improve emotional resilience and increase feelings of well-being.

Finally, don’t forget that help is also available if you feel despondent in even more serious ways. Caring, certified counselors at the National Suicide Prevention Hotline are available twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week at 1.800.273.8255. You can get through this trying time; indeed, you will get through it! By leaning on each other, we will all get through it together, despite the many changing emotions we may experience every day. Please visit the PSRC website or call us at 609.751.9699 for more detailed information about upcoming programs.

Nicole Maccarone is PRSC’s care coordinator and serves on the center’s social service outreach team. As a Licensed Clinical Social Worker and Licensed Clinical Alcohol and Drug Counselor, she facilitates individual and group meetings for PSRC participants and assists with many center initiatives.
Seniors for Seniors
by Wendy Lodge, GrandPals coordinator and Carla Servin, assistant GrandPals coordinator

Two weeks after Governor Murphy closed schools, Riva Levy, the coordinator of prevention programs at Corner House in Princeton, NJ, reached out to PSRC to discuss an inter-generational collaboration between the high school seniors in the Corner House leadership program and some of our seniors at PSRC who had been part of the GrandPals program during the school year. We partnered seven seniors on both sides, gave them some suggestions for initial meetings, and off they went, becoming lifelong cyberfriends. All of the comments we received were positive. Here is what one of the high school students had to say:

“I was surprised by how quickly speaking to my senior evolved into as comfortable a situation as speaking to a friend my own age. Talking to my senior has become both a fun and thoughtful experience. I can honestly say I want to be like her when I grow up.”

And one of our PSRC seniors:

“It’s funny, but when I heard about Seniors for Seniors
I thought, “How nice that I might be able to cheer up someone whose last semester of high school has been so truncated.” Then suddenly it occurred to me that instead of me cheering her up, perhaps she saw herself as cheering me up. I didn’t like to think of myself as needing that outreach but I confess, it has been wonderful.”

This pilot program was very successful. The high school students and our seniors shared their thoughts about career paths, sports, hobbies, family, education, music, movies, and pets. They provided support to one another during a difficult period of isolation for both and all discovered more similarities than differences in their lives. We plan to continue this inter-generational program with a new group of Corner House high school seniors in the fall.
AUGUST FEATURED GRANT

Support of GrandPals

“The Nordson Corporation Foundation awards grants to nonprofits in our communities throughout the United States. Since 1989, the Foundation has awarded more than $60 million in grants to improve the quality of life in our communities, placing a special focus on causes related to education. Employees support the foundation by making donations during our annual ‘A Time to Give Campaign,’ or by participating in a Community Affairs Committee (CAC). Committees review grant applications and vote to distribute Foundation funds to deserving local causes.

During the last financial year, the Foundation gave out 362 grants totaling $6.3 million.”
—Nordson Corporation Foundation

PSRC had the good fortune of receiving a 2019 Nordson grant, in support of our GrandPals program. Nordson’s recognition of the intergenerational learning experience for the Princeton kindergarten, autism, and special-ed students is admirable. For the past twenty-three years PSRC GrandPal volunteers have spent dedicated weekly reading time with their individually paired students. The bonds formed over their year together run deep for both students and GrandPals alike. Students gain literacy skills and GrandPals gain a sense of purpose, community, and reduced isolation. This program serves the wellbeing of more than 260 students and 120 dedicated volunteer GrandPals annually.

Funding for this program goes to support PSRC’s two GrandPal staff coordinators, background checks for all volunteers, and the end-of-year appreciation event for both GrandPals and school teachers involved with the program. As a nonprofit organization, we rely on grants and individual funding to cover more than 80% of our operating budget.

Are you PSRC’s Secret Admirer?

Are you our Secret Admirer? Have you made a gift to PSRC in your will or estate plan? If so, please tell us about it. We want to welcome you into the Jocelyn and Carl Helm Legacy Society, whose members are esteemed at PSRC not only for their powerful generosity, but also for their vision and commitment to ensuring the future of our organization. Knowing about your plans allows us to express our appreciation and prepare for a strong future.

Are you thinking about making a gift from your estate plan to PSRC but don’t know how to start or what kind of gift might be best for you to give? Our team can help you explore the many ways you can meet your personal planning objectives while also achieving your charitable goals for PSRC. Just give us a call at 609.751.9699, ext. 103 or email me at ladler@princetonsenior.org and we’ll be glad to walk you through it. Or you can visit our webpage on bequests for more information.

Here are some simple Ways to Leave your Legacy Gift for the Future of PSRC:

- Give life insurance that you no longer need
- Make a gift from your will or trust
- Donate appreciated stock (and save on taxes!)
- Consider a gift of real estate
- Make a gift that gives you fixed payments for life
- Make a gift that protects your assets

It is a special person indeed who is motivated to care so deeply and personally about the future of PSRC. Your support and legacy gifts allow us to continue the good work that you’ve entrusted us to do for many years to come.

PLEASE TELL US ABOUT YOUR GIFT TODAY!

With Gratitude,
