Dear Friends,

September is National Senior Center Month. Sponsored by the National Institute of Senior Centers, this annual celebration promotes senior centers across the country who serve their communities with excellence. This year’s theme, Delivering Vital Connections, highlights centers who engage older adults with programs focusing on mind, body, spirit, and community.

In these unusual times, many senior centers are struggling to remain relevant and keep people connected in vital ways. While many senior centers have been forced to simply close their doors, PSRC has found a way to open ours even wider.

Through our online programming and digital engagement, PSRC continues to provide program offerings that promote lifelong learning and social engagement. Through our social services team, PSRC offers compassionate care, case management, and resource referral. With community connections and partners, PSRC is addressing issues of food insecurity and financial crises. We are here for you — and we will get through this, together!
A few weeks ago, I came across an essay in The NY Times entitled “Why It’s Good to Be Old, Even in a Pandemic,” by Bob Brody. The article caught my attention because it counters the prevailing narrative that older adults are vulnerable and fearful in the midst of this crisis. Brody acknowledges the science and confronts head-on the reality that Covid-19 disproportionately affects older adults (eight in ten deaths are people over the age of sixty-five). He urges rigor in taking precautions to keep oneself and one’s family healthy. At the same time, he argues that he is “having the time of his life.”

While his sunny approach initially caught me off guard, I confirmed his instincts in several conversations in the intervening weeks since. Several folks have shared with me that they are finding joy in increased connections with their family (albeit electronically). Others have shared appreciation for new hobbies, new joy in “walking the neighborhood,” and even greater appreciation for simple pleasures such as watching the sunset or exploring new towns on a Sunday drive.

One of the key factors contributing to this positive outlook is resiliency that strengthens with age. Patty David, director of personal fulfillment with AARP, notes that “older people are better positioned to cope with stresses, including this pandemic.” The ability to put things in perspective, and to understand this crisis as one snapshot in the panorama of life, enables older adults to sometimes remove themselves from the daily rollercoaster of anxiety and stress that so many are feeling. A 2016 study from the Center on Healthy Aging at the University of California concluded that older people report higher levels of satisfaction, happiness, and well-being, coupled with lower levels of anxiety, depression, and stress than their younger counterparts.

Brody offers several helpful suggestions in his essay, including:

- Take care of your health — not only in terms of keeping safe from the virus — but also in terms of finding fulfillment through healthy practices (leisurely walks in nature, discovering laughter)
- Reach out more to family, friends, and former colleagues. Write a letter. Make a phone call. Stay connected.
- Practice small acts of kindness. Each chance encounter in a grocery store or a post office — even through a mask — creates an opportunity for kindness. Even a smile with bright eyes and a simple hello carries great significance in a pandemic.

At the same time, please pay attention to your own mental health and be aware of your own emotional state. While some, like Brody, are experiencing joy in the midst of this pandemic, other research suggests that an increasing number of people are experiencing depression and other mental health challenges. If you are experiencing signs of depression (including changes in sleeping patterns, altered moods, confusion, or difficulty paying attention), please reach out to your medical provider. You may also reach out to our social services team who will help connect you with the resources that you need.

All the Best,

FYI SEMINAR — “COMBATTING ISOLATION AND LONELINESS IN ELDERS”
Friday, September 25 at 11:45 a.m.
In today’s world the risk factors that contribute to social isolation and loneliness have multiplied and are associated with increased physical and emotional negative outcomes in elders. This program will discuss the risk factors, but more importantly will review ways to combat these afflictions to help one find purpose and dignity in their lives.

Christopher Kellogg, LSW, has been putting clients first throughout his more than fifteen years in long term and subacute care. It was this concern that eventually led him to be the driving force in founding NightingaleNJ. He prides himself on forging through obstacles and creating a seamless transition so to ensure continuity of care.
Registration required, no fee.

September 3 — Melissa Klapper
BALLET CLASS: AN AMERICAN HISTORY
Over the course of the twentieth century, ballet class became part of American childhood across borders of gender, class, race, and sexuality. The presentation, drawn from Dr. Melissa R. Klapper’s new book Ballet Class: An American History, will highlight such topics as ballet in popular culture, race, and gender in ballet class, and the connections between ballet class and significant currents in American social and cultural history.

Dr. Melissa R. Klapper is professor of history and director of women’s & gender studies at Rowan University. Her work and books have been awarded numerous grants and fellowships, including the National Jewish Book Award in Women’s Studies.

September 10 — Ronnit Vasserman
THE MOST INFLUENTIAL AFRICAN AMERICAN ARTISTS, LET’S VIEW THE WORLD THROUGH THEIR EYES
An important shift in the art world has been that African American artists are more visible than ever. This lecture explores the most influential African American artists with a special emphasis on emerging voices of the last twenty-five years.

Ronnit Vasserman is the founder Art Connect Group, a full-service art consulting firm located in New York City. In addition to helping clients acquire art, she educates them on the latest trends by organizing events throughout the year.

September 17 — Leslie Ginsparg Klein
LEARNING HISTORY THROUGH PORTRAITS: A STUDY OF COLONIAL JEWISH WOMEN
Art is a often overlooked source in the study of history. This session explores what we can learn about Colonial History, early Jewish communities, and ourselves, by studying portraits of the past.

Leslie Ginsparg Klein received her PhD from New York University. She is the academic dean of Women's Institute of Torah Seminary/Maalot Baltimore, an Orthodox Jewish college for women. She is an accomplished scholar, author, and lecturer on Jewish history, Bible, leadership, and communication skills.

RETIREMENT PROGRAMS

MEN IN RETIREMENT — TBD
Date and time to be determined.

WOMEN IN RETIREMENT
Friday, September 18 at 10:00 a.m.
The meeting will feature Sandy Smith, a League of Women Voters member from our own WIR group, providing voting tips for the 2020 election. This nonpartisan talk will cover the entire process from registration to the actual vote: voting by mail and at the polls, where to find information on candidates, and whom to contact with questions. She will also suggest ways to get involved in the election. All are welcome.

TRANSITION TO RETIREMENT
Friday, September 18 at 3:00 p.m.
This group addresses the many kinds of issues that can arise during the transition to retirement. The group is facilitated by Dave Roussell, MSEd, MSW, LSW, PSRC care coordinator and HomeFriends coordinator.

A Cool Notebook

OneNote is a cool electronic notebook that Microsoft developed years ago. And it’s free! Yes! Free for Windows, MacOS, and both Android and iOS mobile devices. Free. Free. Free. (You do need a Microsoft account, but that’s free, too.)

Anything you might put in a physical three-ring binder, you can put into a OneNote electronic notebook: Notes. Pictures. Webpages you need to refer to. Instructions. Recipes. To-do lists. Emails you don’t want to part with.

Here’s one example: A couple of years ago, we started shopping for a new HVAC system. The hamster wheel on our twenty-year-old AC blower was wearing out, and the hamsters were threatening to go on strike. (See photo of the lead hamster, Fred, below.)

So, I created a new section in my personal OneNote notebook called “HVAC Replacement,” and a new page called “Installation.” Then I searched for HVAC installers on the web and used OneNote to save their contact information, specs about different HVAC brands, and a list of requirements. (I was looking for a hamster-free model.)

I copied the web addresses from the Lennox and Trane websites and pasted those onto the OneNote page along with the model numbers. (Ever try to write down a website address on a piece of paper?) OneNote pages are “free format,” so I could place notes, pictures, and links wherever I wanted.

And because OneNote uses Microsoft’s OneDrive “cloud” storage, I can also view this notebook on my iPhone and iPad. Instead of having my notes strewn about on papers here and there, they were all easily available in my OneNote notebook.

I’m quite comfortable including personal information in OneNote because my computer is password-protected. Indeed, keeping personal data on your computer is safer than in a paper notebook that could be stolen or lost.

Working in OneNote should be familiar if you’ve used Microsoft Office. But even if you haven’t, the interface is simple enough.

If you need technical help, please contact us at princetonsenior.org/psrc-tech-resources/.
In a world where almost everyone is either Zooming or using some form of video chatting to stay connected, there are still a great number of people who are not online in any form.

I am honestly worried about the people that are living alone and social (physical) distancing from friends and family where they can’t see people’s faces. Do you know anyone like that? If so, I’d love to hear from you so that I can reach out to them!

We have volunteers in our Virtual HomeFriends program who make regular calls to people that are not leaving their homes. If you would like to volunteer to make calls you can complete an online volunteer application here.

If you would like to receive a regular phone call, please reach out to one of our social service team members below or complete a registration form here.

Recommendations for social distancing change regularly and we are all faced with asking the questions about what is best for each of us. It can be so confusing but talking things out with others can alleviate a lot of the stress. PSRC has online groups where people gather regularly to share their experiences, ask questions and even make new friends. Most people are using Zoom but others use their telephone, cell, or landline, to call in and get connected. See the list of groups on page 13, or go to our website to read descriptions and register from there.

The volunteers in our PSRC Tech Lab have made it possible for so many people to get connected, even when they were resistant at first to learning new technology. We want to help keep people connected with others. Our popular Evergreen Forum classes begin this month and there are still some course openings. Reach out to tech@princetonsenior.org today for Zoom training if you still need assistance in getting started.

If you know a senior that doesn’t drive, and lives in Princeton, you should tell them to register for the Crosstown Transportation door-to-door program. Crosstown is taking all precautions to make the ride safe to get to doctor appointments and other Princeton locations. PSRC manages the registration. For more information go here.

We created a special Social Services page on our website with many resources to keep you connected to the things you may need. Please take a look at https://www.princetonsenior.org/social-services-resources/.

We look forward to hearing from you. Send us a note to say “Hi” and let us know how you are doing: socialservices@princetonsenior.org.

Reach out to one of the PSRC social services team members for assistance with an aging loved one, questions about senior benefits, transportation, decisions about what services are needed to age in place, and anything related to seniors navigating life transitions. Call 609.751.9699.

Facilitator: Dave Roussell, MSED, MSW, LSW

WOMEN IN RETIREMENT — Usually third Friday of the month. No fee.
Meet interesting people, make new friendships, enjoy conversation, share experiences and join in engaging activities that stimulate personal growth.
This group is facilitated by Cheri Chalofsky, Joan Fredericks, and Dina Kravets.
You know the saying, “The only two things certain in life are death and taxes.”

The good news is, while preparing for the first, you can reduce the burden of the second — both on yourself and your heirs — through careful financial and estate planning.

TRIMMING THE TAX BILL

While many people worry about the federal estate tax, it applies only to high-net-worth individuals. In 2019, it was levied just on assets in excess of $11.4 million.

Unfortunately, most people don’t realize that other taxes are far more likely to take a large chunk — in some cases, up to seventy percent — out of assets they leave to their loved ones. And those taxes apply to just about everyone, regardless of financial status.

This is why it’s important to meet with a certified financial planner, or CFP, to help you decide on a money-saving strategy that’s right for you and your heirs, and your charities of choice.

WE AT PSRC ARE ABLE TO HELP YOU DISCOVER THE BENEFITS OF GIVING WISELY

Trusts, life insurance, charitable gift annuities, charitable donations, donor-advised funds, even outright gifts to PSRC, friends, and family members, are all strategies that can reduce the tax load on your assets. Plan ahead — otherwise your good intentions could fall flat.

Learn how these benefits work by visiting princetonsenior.plannedgiving.org or contact Lisa Adler at ladler@princetonsenior.org or 609.751.9699, ext. 103.

FROM THE DEVELOPMENT OFFICE

VOLUNTEER APPRECIATION AWARD

to be honored at the PSRC Fall Fundraiser

The annual volunteer appreciation award, given by the PSRC board and staff, recognizes the extraordinary service and dedication of an individual or group committed to the mission of PSRC.

This year we honor

The TECH LAB Volunteers

Evelyn Sasmor
Craig Sanders
Gaurav Kumar
Don Benjamin
Don Gould

Generous with their time and talents, this year’s recipients enabled PSRC to make the astounding shift to online programming. PSRC will have a special tribute to our Tech Lab volunteers at the fall fundraiser on October 17 at 7:30 p.m.

We invite you to join with us in recognizing the extraordinary service of our Tech Lab volunteers by taking an ad in the digital program or making a generous donation in their honor.

Donations can be made at princetonsenior.org or by calling 609.751.9699.

Ad and sponsorship information can found at princetonsenior.org/fall-fundraiser-event.
