Evergreen Forum Summer Sampler
All courses are virtual using Zoom

The Evergreen Forum Summer Sampler is coming in June. Here’s your chance to embrace the Evergreen experience. Four weeks, four subjects, all for you. Stay tuned for details.
Dear Friends,

For several years, I straddled the line that many have straddled before me — between being a parent to my growing children and a child of my aging parents. One of the greatest blessings of my life was to watch the relationship that formed between my mother and my children as a result of my mother’s decision to retire early to spend significant time with my children. As she aged, and they grew into young adults, the strength of those relationships served us all. In the last years of her life, my children shared the role of caregiver alongside of me, and we all grew to understand the joys and struggles of caregiving.

The Princeton Senior Resource Center is committed to walking this journey alongside caregivers as well as the older adults for whom they are providing care. Throughout this issue, you will read several features and find information that will support you in the caregiving/care-receiving journey. The story below is a first-hand account of a daughter who connected her mom with PSRC — and the difference that it has made in their journey. As you read these stories, and review the available resources and programs, think about someone in your life who would benefit from what PSRC offers — and pass it along!

All the Best,
Drew A. Dyson, PhD, Chief Executive Officer

Through a Child’s Eyes

During this time when maintaining social distance to ensure the health and safety of our elderly loved ones, many adults of aging parents are faced with new challenges. Not only are we responsible for our parents’ physical health, but also their mental well-being. And sometimes it comes as a surprise that our elderly parents, normally so active and busy with their own lives, can fall victim to the effects of loneliness.

In the fall of 2019, my mother had finally decided to retire from her job. One would think at the age of eighty, she would now slow down. But this was not the case. Living in a senior living community with my sister and brother-in-law, she had no need of a senior center because classes and social engagements filled her calendar. She would regularly drive herself to a nearby town to paint with her art group and meet to lunch with friends. She took advantage of the chair yoga group and free library in her senior community and she attended church every Sunday.

Mom frequently enjoyed area music events with family. Her last such outing was in February 2020 when she and several of her six grown children and their spouses gathered at a local Irish music event complete with dancing, beer, and bagpipers. It was a grand celebration!

Then, within a few weeks, things slowed down due to Covid-19 fears. My mother was put on lockdown and quarantined to her home. At first it was just a small hindrance and a bother to reschedule regular doctor appointments. In March 2020 our family gathered on Zoom to do what would turn into a weekly check-in call. Mom had a tablet that she used for art and photographs and that was the device she would use to log on to Zoom. Not too adept with technology and hearing-challenged, she did her best to participate. But honestly, just seeing everyone’s faces seemed to lift her spirits. For three months, this appeared to be a bright spot to her weeks of confinement. She had my sister and brother-in-law with her, but we could see the toll of the loss of social contact weighing on her.

In May 2020 we signed mom up for the PSRC Zoom chair yoga class. Encouraged by the family she was willing to try this exercise. This boosted her physical activity and gave her more confidence on Zoom. My brother-in-law was still setting up her tablet for each Zoom event, but she was getting better with the technology. The assistance of the PSRC technology team helped her take her “zooming” to the next level. And then in June, we began a second Zoom meet-up for art. Mom would log on to gather with the daughters and granddaughters to work on painting projects and have some virtual social time.

By the end of the summer, we sensed that she was feeling down again. A few of her friends were coping with illness and mom was unable to assist them as she normally would. Instead, she would speak to them over the phone, but being such a social person, we could see depression was beginning to settle in again. Looking for further ways to help, we persuaded her to join the PSRC Fireside Chat and the Let’s Talk groups on Zoom. The friendly engagement with her peers widened her communal network. This was just what the doctor ordered.

Through fall of 2020, mom was enrolled in PSRC’s Art in the Academy lectures and regularly participating in PSRC chair yoga and support groups. She then discovered how to attend church online and even joined an online prayer group with other members of her congregation. For Christmas my brother gifted her with a “seniors” online art class. Her calendar was filling up again. These groups and classes helped her endure the dark days of fall and winter.

Thankfully for PSRC’s programs, our family had resources to keep our mom connected with other seniors online. She now has the confidence, and a new laptop, to connect to her Zoom groups and classes without assistance. She still looks forward to new PSRC groups and classes and is thankful to the PSRC social services, programs, and tech teams for making it possible for her to navigate her way during the pandemic.

Phone and Text Scams

You just received a call from Verizon that your computer is infected with a virus. The voice on the far end offers to remove the malware and provide a security service for $799 for life (not sure who’s life). “The service will cover all your computers, tablets, and smartphones.” But he needs access to your hard drive to install the special security application.

You agree to a five-year plan and give him your credit card information. He then hangs up without doing anything. Or, if you let him access your computer, he may add a password or encrypt your files and demand payment to restore your hard drive.

Of course, it’s a scam.

So is the text message you received from your bank that they froze your account, but if you call a special number you can regain access. So is the phone call from Amazon that someone in Moline, Iowa, has charged an item to your account and “… please press ‘1’ so we can reverse the charges on your credit card.” Nope. Not legit.

We’ve noticed an increase in phone, email, and text scams that sound and look official but can cost you hundreds or thousands of dollars or render your computer unusable. The scammers aren’t trying to get your information, just your money. Most of the scammers work from call centers in India and use fake American names, like “Bob Jones” or “Kevin Wilson,” or Mary-Lou Philips.” (None of my many friends from India are named Bob or Kevin or Mary-Lou.)

Here are some general facts to keep in mind:

1. Internet service providers, such as Verizon and Xfinity, don’t monitor your computer and will not call to tell you that you have a computer virus.
2. Computer companies, like Apple or Microsoft, won’t call you, either. None of these companies monitor your equipment.
3. Webpage pop-ups that warn you’ve been infected are usually bogus. Just close your browser.
4. Your bank will not text you that your checking account has been locked, and if you want to unlock it, “simply enter your account number.” If you’re worried, call your bank.
5. The Social Security Administration will not call you to report that your social security number has been found in an abandoned Toyota Corolla near El Paso along with twenty-two pounds of illicit drugs.
6. PSE&G will not call you demanding immediate payment in Walmart gift cards. Nor will American Water or the IRS.
7. Your credit card company may send you a text to confirm that recent purchases are legitimate. Those are OK—you usually answer with a Y or N. But don’t click any links. Call your bank if you’re concerned.

And here are some tips to keep you safe:

1. If you are uncertain of a phone caller’s integrity, hang up.
2. Don’t give anyone you don’t know access to your computer.
3. Never click on links in emails or text messages that ask you to confirm your account information, ID, or password. Call the company from the phone numbers you already have or check your account from their website.
4. If you’re worried about suspicious messages, webpages that warn you that you’ve been hacked, or phone calls from Kevin, contact our Tech Resources webpage princetonsenior.org/psrc-tech-resources/ for help.
It has been one year since the passing of my dad. If you think about what was happening in April/May 2020 you will remember that everything in the world was upside down. When my dad got really sick with kidney failure and admitted to a hospital in South Jersey, visitation was still allowed. Following what was happening around the country, I knew that my time to visit with him could soon be limited.

After nine days of visitation, one of the nurses told me to be prepared, because if I came to the hospital on the tenth day, I may arrive to find out that there was no visitation allowed in the hospital. No notice, no heads up, just turned away. I consider myself blessed that I had developed a positive and collaborative relationship with my dad’s healthcare team. I was able to have my in-person good-bye with my dad, on that ninth day, because there was one person who shared news with me, that wasn’t public yet.

Caregiving is hard. Plain and simple, hard, in a pandemic, or not. Each day was filled with so many decisions to be made. Having someone as an advocate to share and discuss options is so important. I was lucky to have my sister on my side, every step of the way. Even with my sister’s medical background and my social services background, there were many times when we wondered whether we were doing things the right way. If you have ever been a caregiver, you know that the right way, is only what is right in that moment.

Having a support team will help in the most difficult times. That support may come in the form of a sibling, friend, support group, therapist, or in a bereavement counselor. Having all documents in order will help tremendously. Searching for things while under so much stress will be less time with your loved one.

I’d like to end with a small tribute to my dad. I was his first born and he called me honey, and sweetheart most of my life. I always knew that he loved me unconditionally, and what more could a child ask of a parent. My dad was full of laughter and loved to give people a hard time, especially the waitresses at his favorite diner. A month before he went into the hospital, I called the diner to let them know I would be bringing him in and that he had just celebrated his birthday. They said, “We’ve got this”. After our meal the whole restaurant staff came out singing a birthday tune, and they presented him with an Oscar the Grouch cupcake. He absolutely loved it, and we all laughed for quite a while. I cherish this memory.

PSRC is unique in many ways and one of them is that we have a social services team ready to assist in difficult times. We are here to offer support, give referrals to resources needed, and be a listening ear. We have a general Caregiver support group twice a month and a Children of Aging Parents support group once a month. There is a Bereavement group once a month. In addition to the groups, we have a Health Care Decisions Day, twice a year. We have a recording of April’s presentation by our social worker, Dave Roussell, about which documents you should have prepared in advance of any illness. Reach out if you missed his talk.

If you have any questions, need some guidance and support, please reach out to us by email at socialservices@princetonsenior.org or call 609.751.9699.
NEW VISITATION GUIDELINES FOR LONG TERM CARE

On March 22 the NJ Department of Health updated its long-term care visitation guidance. The new visitation memo states that every resident has a right to social visits, including anyone of the resident’s choice (ex. grandchildren, friends, clergy, etc.).

Both fully vaccinated and unvaccinated residents have a right to social visits. Unvaccinated residents may have their visits restricted if fewer than seventy percent of the center’s residents are vaccinated and the CALI (Covid-19 Activity Level) score in the area is high or severe. Residents who have Covid-19 or who are in quarantine are not permitted social visitation.

Most importantly, a positive case in one section of the facility no longer shuts down the entire facility for a month, or months. If anyone tests positive, all staff and residents are tested within a few days of that positive test. If the virus has not spread to other units, social visitation may resume immediately in unaffected areas.

Facilities may require social visits to be scheduled to ensure it is prepared to handle the volume of visitors at one time.

In some cases, visits can occur in your room, especially if you are in a single room, but many visits will occur in an area of the facility designated for safe social visitation. You can hug your loved ones as long as they are wearing a closely fitting mask and you are fully vaccinated. Mask wearing and handwashing must be followed at all times.

Ask the facility when they are opening to social visitation. If staff tell you that you are not eligible for social visitation or if you are not comfortable with the length/frequency of your visits, contact the Ombudsman’s Office.

Spotlight on Akin Care Senior Services: Proud PSRC Annual Sponsor

When we began Akin Care Senior Services, our goal was to provide the best possible care for our clients. Everything we do begins and ends with the wellbeing of our clients. By selecting the right match from our highly trained, reliable, and compassionate caregivers, we help you remain independent, in control, and in your home.

There is significant evidence that elders heal more quickly and remain independent longer with home care and that it is the most satisfying form of care available to the American public. We work with you to ensure you, or the one you love, lives independently and in control of their days, wherever they call home. We provide a 100% guarantee of a good fit between you and your caregiver.

Many of our caregivers have nurse’s aide training as well a number who are Certified Dementia Practitioners. Our expectation is that our caregivers have had the life experiences of raising their own children as well as caring for their parents or grandparents at some point in the past. We feel that these experiences are invaluable. A guiding philosophy is that we will never hire someone we wouldn’t have felt comfortable caring for our own parents.

Akin Care caregivers are OUR employees, licensed by the New Jersey Board of Nursing, bonded, and insured. We thoroughly interview, screen, and background/reference check (national, state, and county). Our caregivers are trained, oriented to each client, and competency tested.

Our family and staff are rooted in the greater Princeton area and we care deeply about building the kind of environment that fosters deep respect for the elders among us. That is why we support the Princeton Senior Resource Center and appreciate the assets it brings to this community.

IN MEMORIAM

The Princeton Senior Resource Center community is saddened by the passing of PSRC advisory council member Phyllis Marchand.

Phyllis was a beloved member of the community — and an important contributor to the success of PSRC through the years. Many will remember her contributions to the community through her public service. We at PSRC remember the wonderful kindness — and an incredible amount of wisdom passed along to all those she encountered and nurtured. On behalf of the PSRC board of trustees, advisory council, staff and participants, we extend our deepest sympathies and condolences to the entire Marchand family.

PSRC is honored to announce that in June we will be celebrating LGBTQIA+ Pride Month. We invite all of you to join us as we recognize the influences and challenges of this community. More details to come.
