History of Thanksgiving Series is sponsored by Artis Senior Living and Lawrenceville Optician
Dear Friends,

Early in life, my mother instilled in me a passion for creating inclusive communities where every person is welcomed and affirmed for who they are as a unique individual. Working as a geriatric social worker at a residential facility on the Jersey shore, she modeled the importance of listening deeply and attending to each person's story in a way that honored their sense of worth and dignity. She modeled a “wide welcome” that embraced people and created space for everyone to feel a sense of home.

Throughout the history of the Princeton Senior Resource Center, we have sought to do the same. For more than forty-five years, PSRC has opened our doors to older adults throughout the community and sought to create a space where everyone is welcome. I am sure that we haven’t always gotten it right, and I apologize for the times we have fallen short, but I want to assure you that our commitment is to continue our growth as a staff and as an organization in becoming a truly diverse and inclusive center for all the older adults in our community.

Towards that end, over the last two years our staff has embarked on a journey of listening, learning, and understanding to hear the stories and listen to the needs of the LGBT+ older adults in our community. First, partnering with the Bayard Rustin Center in Princeton for a series of staff workshops and learning opportunities. And most recently, working with SAGE USA to continue our learning journey and work towards our certification as an LGBT+ inclusive and culturally competent service provider.

I am proud to announce that this fall, the Princeton Senior Resource Center has completed SAGECare’s LGBT+ cultural competency training program and has earned the SAGECare Platinum credential. SAGE, which stands for Services and Advocacy for GLBT+ Elders, assists senior care agencies in creating fully LGBT+ inclusive services for the growing LGBT+ senior population, which will number seven million by 2030.

SAGECare provides LGBT+ competency training and consulting on LGBT+ aging issues to service providers focusing on expanding, transforming, and elevating the person-directed services offered by senior-serving agencies across the country. The AARP says of SAGECare that the credentialing program “teaches elder care providers the importance of a welcoming community.”

It is our sincere desire that the SAGE Platinum accreditation gives confidence to our older adult LGBT+ community that our senior resource center is a welcoming environment for all. Through this process, and our commitment to continued growth, we are ensuring that we continuously apply principles and practices to meet the needs and concerns of the LGBT+ older adults in our community. YOU are welcome here!

All the Best,

As current director of community engagement at the Heard Museum in Phoenix, Arizona, his main focus is producing cultural art workshops in regional Indian communities, documenting the process where permissible, and sharing with the broader American public through special films and lectures.
Monenerkit has a firm belief that art works for the greater public benefit. It creates expressive patterns of understanding between individuals, communities, and beyond. The Internet Turns Fifty

Most of us use the internet every day with little thought of how it began. With October 2021 marking the internet’s fiftieth anniversary, I figured it was a good time to explain how this amazing technology became our planet’s ubiquitous information distribution network.

The internet began in the 1960s with the need for a robust data communications network that would allow research scientists around the country to remotely access the limited number of large, powerful research computers that were part of the Department of Defense’s Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA). At that time, researchers could only access those computers using separate, dedicated data terminals, each with its own set of operating instructions. Nor could those computers easily share information, other than perhaps by exchanging magnetic tape reels through the mail or by courier.

DARPA tasked two research scientists, Ivan Sutherland and Bob Taylor, with developing a data network that would: 1. Interconnect the DARPA computers; 2. Allow research scientists to access that network remotely using a single terminal; and 3. Provide a way to exchange messages among the DARPA network users.

What resulted was DARPANET, which went online in late 1969 (as ARPANET). The message exchange mechanism became today’s email. (The first email was sent in 1971, and the first spam in 1978—an ad for digital computers.)

But it took more than simply connecting computers and scientists (users) with wires. The information had to be routed between a particular computer and a particular user or between computers. The telephone system, which could provide data communications, wasn’t a practical solution because it’s a “point-to-point” switched network (Dial. Ring. Answer. Talk. Hang up). And back then, the telephone network comprised electromechanical switches and copper wires that were far too slow for effective data exchange.

Packets

The solution was “packet switching,” which the internet still uses. Here’s how it works: An information stream from Computer A is divided into small, fixed-sized packets of “bits” along with the address of sending Computer A and the address of receiving Computer B. Then, other computers along the way shuffle the packets over the best available routes so that sequential packets may take different paths, depending on what other data transfers are taking place.

When the packets arrive at Computer B milliseconds later, they are reassembled in the correct order for processing. Today, internet packet switching is fast enough for 4k video streaming.

I’m still amazed at the speed and vastness of the internet. Whether we watch a documentary on Hulu, Zoom an Evergreen Forum class, or send an email to Aunt Sally in Bayonne, the internet handles our packets with ease. Pretty neat.

If you need technology help go to the PSRC website, click the Tech Resources webpage and fill out the Tech Request Form at princetonsenior.org/psrc-tech-resources/.

Alzheimer’s and Dementia Awareness from the Alzheimer’s Association

In the early stage of Alzheimer’s, a person may function independently. He or she may still drive, work and be part of social activities. Despite this, the person may feel as if he or she is having memory lapses, such as forgetting familiar words or the location of everyday objects. Symptoms may not be widely apparent at this stage, but family and close friends may take notice and a doctor would be able to identify symptoms using certain diagnostic tools.

Common difficulties include:
- Coming up with the right word or name.
- Remembering names when introduced to new people.
- Having difficulty performing tasks in social or work settings.
- Forgetting material that was just read.
- Losing or misplacing a valuable object.
- Experiencing increased trouble with planning or organizing.

During the early stage, it's possible for people with dementia to live well by taking control of their health and wellness, and focusing their energy on aspects of their life that are most meaningful to them. In addition, this is the ideal time to put legal, financial, and end-of-life plans in place because the person with dementia will be able to participate in decision-making.¹

Virtual CE Seminar
Medicaid, Medicare, Veterans Benefits: The Ethics Behind It All
Thursday, November 4 at 1:00–2:00 p.m.

Current long-term costs are staggering. Medicaid, Medicare, and Veteran's benefits are three public programs that offset care costs for qualified applicants. The eligibility criteria, application process, and path to approval are mired with pitfalls. Ethical issues arise from planning financially for these benefits and from competing interests between patients and the health care industry. This seminar aims to educate participants about the laws and regulations governing these benefits and the ethical issues therein.

Jerold E. Rothkoff, Esq., a practicing New Jersey and Pennsylvania attorney, is the principal of the Rothkoff Law Group, where he dedicates his practice to serving clients in the areas of elder law, life care planning, asset protection, estate planning, and long-term care advocacy. rothkofflaw.com

Registration required: https://bit.ly/LearningWithPSRC_AkinCare
Sharon Hurley • shurley@princetonsenior.org • 609.751.9699

This CE seminar is hosted by Rothkoff Law Group. CEs for social workers licensed in NJ and PA are awarded by NASW-NJ Chapter. SW credit certificates will come directly from NASW-NJ via email. Please ensure that we have your current email address on file. A general certificate will be distributed by RLG to all participants with approvals from these boards: NAB/NCERS, CCMC, SHRM, CA Board of Nursing.

Spotlight on Lawrenceville Optician: Proud PSRC Special Series Sponsor

Each customer has individual requirements in terms of vision correction. With the opticians at Lawrenceville Optician, you can count on getting competent, personal, and detailed advice. Whether you are looking for new frames or have questions about the latest technology in lenses, Lawrenceville Optician has provided their clientele personal, professional, and detailed advice for over forty years with our opticians having over sixty years of experience. We are here to help you get the lenses you need in the stylish frames you want. Our extensive frame selection ranges from sporty to trendy; opulent to elegant. Lawrenceville Optician stays fashionably focused on giving you what you need to see the world through amazing frames.

We understand the importance of clear vision, especially as we age, so we are thrilled to support the Princeton Senior Resource Center and the programs they make available to older adults. Making an individual pair of glasses requires several work steps that are still traditionally done by hand today to ensure quality. Our opticians therefore personally grind your lenses in our workshop. We can carry out the repairs right here at our office. That way you are guaranteed long-lasting satisfaction with your finished glasses.

What you can expect from us

• Quality, care, and service
• Expert guidance from licensed opticians
• All services by hand on-site; from measuring to grinding
• Free glasses check and lens cleaning

Stop by our shop — we look forward to seeing you!
