GRANDPALS RETURNS!

After a two-year Covid related hiatus, we are thrilled to announce that the GrandPals program returns to foster the love of reading and learning in some of the Princeton Public School kindergarten classes. GrandPals volunteers share stories with students, build meaningful relationships with the children who may not have a grandparent nearby, and engage in a lively, warm environment.

GrandPals, bringing generations together!

Dear Friends,

In 1992, four Princeton-area friends came to understand, through their professional and personal experiences, that a strong social support network is a critical factor of aging well. Together, they formed Community Without Walls, “a membership organization of individuals dedicated to pursuing mutually supportive activities to enhance members’ ability to grow older in their own homes and communities, for as long as possible, successfully and with dignity.”

Now, after thirty years of fruitful service to the community, CWW is transitioning to become a program entity of the Princeton Senior Resource Center. We are delighted to welcome CWW into PSRC and we look forward to many more years of successful operation.

CWW is organized into “houses” (chapters), that have up to one hundred members in each, that provide programming, social and affinity groups, and member support. The goal of maintaining this structure is to allow members of each house to develop a true sense and spirit of community as relationships are built over time. These relationships generate a support system where members offer and receive help from one another when needed.

Each house has regular (often monthly) meetings that feature speakers or program topics of interest to the group members. In addition, houses have a variety of social and affinity groups — such as gardening groups, ethnic dining groups, movie groups, and much more. Each house determines its own structure and programs/activities throughout the year. New houses may be formed when twenty-five people come together with a desire to form a new chapter.

Members pay modest annual dues (currently $35/year) to belong to one of the houses. Dues cover administrative and operational expenses incurred by PSRC, as well as program support for each house’s activities throughout the year.
On our PSRC website, you can find a brief history of Community Without Walls, as well as a brief description of each house. You will also find a form to express your interest in becoming a member of a CWW house — or connecting with one of the leaders of CWW to find out more.

If you are looking to expand your own social support network — or if you are interested in being a part of a community of friends who socialize, learn, and have fun together — then I encourage you to explore what Community Without Walls offers. I know that CWW has been life-changing for so many of its current and former members — and I believe it could be for you as well.

All the Best,
Drew A. Dyson, PhD
Chief Executive Officer

Is CWW right for you?

Do you want to continue to live a meaningful life in the home and community you love?

Are you looking to make new friends, form new connections, and join a community of mutual support?

Have you wondered who will be there for you as you age?

Do you live in the greater Princeton area (within 25 miles of Princeton)?

Then CWW may be for you!

Hear what current members of CWW have to say:

“CWW made a big difference to us when we moved to Princeton. We knew only a few people here and it was great to be welcomed almost instantly into an entire community of interesting and friendly people.”

“Community Without Walls has been a rich resource for us — a place to find new friends, deepen ongoing friendships, share ideas, give and receive support, have fun, and experience many and varied aspects of community life. It’s a pleasure to be a CWW member!”

“My wife and I have found the Community Without Walls to be a valuable resource for forming much needed new friendships as well as a source of support for the physical and emotional challenges we have experienced as we age.”

“I never thought I’d make new friends at my age.”

Interested in joining CWW — or learning more about membership? Fill out this form and one of the CWW leadership team will be in touch with you!

We are currently in the Medicare open enrollment period. The enrollment period will end on December 7, 2022. What should you know about open enrollment? If you have a Medicare health or drug plan, this period is for you to make any changes to your coverage. If you do not have an additional plan and want to enroll, you can also do that now. PSRC is hosting a Medicare information session at our NSK location on Monday, November 14, from 1:00–3:00 p.m. You will hear from SHIP (State Health Insurance Assistance Program) and Senior Advisors. This presentation will help you learn more about Medicare decision-making and there will be an opportunity for individual counseling after the formal presentation.

Kelly Ott is the Mercer County SHIP coordinator at Children's Home Society of NJ. She has been working in nonprofit volunteer management throughout her career. She is a graduate of Stockton University. Metta Cahill is a certified SHIP Counselor who has been volunteering since 2018. She is a retired nurse and nurse-midwife. Roderick Spann is an independent broker with Senior Advisors. The top priority of Senior Advisors is to reduce stress for Medicare beneficiaries by providing education and overview of available choices, and making recommendations for coverage. Senior Advisors offers a FREE annual review of your prescription plan to ensure you have the most cost-efficient card.

The era of passwords may be waning. The “passkey” concept should make account logins quicker and safer.

I probably have over 200 passwords stored in the 1Password company’s cloud servers. They’re safe and easy to look up, but managing these pieces of flotsam and jetsam is a pain.

Fortunately, there’s help on the horizon!

Before we go there, let’s talk about authentication—for instance, how does Amazon know it’s you who is ordering a gross of Crest Toothpaste?¹

Online web accounts ask for two pieces of information (we call them “keys”) to confirm that you are you:

1. An ID, like your email address, is a “public” key that you give out willy-nilly to scads of people and websites. This is how a website knows who’s knocking at its door (so to speak) and where to send you emails. Email addresses make good IDs because they’re unique, and, like your street address, they’re public so folks can find you. On the other hand, you don't want the bug man² walking in your front door, so you keep it locked with a private key on your keyring.³

2. A password is the private “key” you use to complete your online authentication. (This means you shouldn’t use the same password for every website, just like you don’t use the same key for your house, car, and safe deposit box at the bank. And that’s why I have 200 passwords.)

Two-Factor Authentication

Over the past few years, some websites—especially banks—have added two-factor authentication to their login process. After you enter your ID and password, the bank sends you a text message with a one-time numeric string. When you enter that number, the website has authenticated you on TWO devices—your computer and your smartphone (or tablet). (If you don’t have a smartphone, you can opt to have the website call your phone and recite the numeric string you’ll type in).

“Biometric” Identifiers

Unfortunately, no matter how many “keys” and codes we have to enter, IDs and passwords are just text characters that can be stolen, forgotten, or accidentally sent in response to a phishing email.

Fortunately, most of us have two unique identifying traits that can’t be replicated: our face and fingerprints. Many newer mobile devices and laptops already use face ID or fingerprint (“biometric”) sensors to ensure that the actual owner is using that device.

I have an older iPhone that uses my previously stored fingerprint to “wake up” the phone and authenticate me as its rightful owner.

Now that I’ve authenticated myself on my iPhone, there should be a way the phone can authenticate me to the website I’m visiting.

Passkeys

And that’s what passkeys do. Apple, Microsoft, and Google are major players in implementing the FIDO (Fast IDentity Online) alliance’s protocols that can use my smart devices’ biometric authentication to encrypt my login IDs into what are called “passkeys.”

Once a website has adopted the FIDO standard, it will accept my passkey from my smartphone, tablet, or computer and then automatically admit me to the website. There’s no password to remember—or forget—or lose.

Apple is implementing Passkeys on its newest operating systems this fall (MacOS Ventura, iOS 16, and iPad OS 16). Google will add Passkeys to Android devices by the end of this year. Microsoft is aiming for 2022–2023 with Windows 11 updates.

I suspect websites will adopt the passkey protocol sooner rather than later to ensure their client’s data is secure and make ordering toothpaste even easier.

² We have a nice bug man who comes by every few months and looks for bugs. He then tells us if he finds any.

³ I keep my keys in the refrigerator because that’s where I’ll often find them.

Alzheimer’s Awareness Month

November is Alzheimer’s Awareness Month, a time to heighten awareness about Alzheimer’s disease and show support for the more than 6.2 million Americans living with it.

In the early stage of Alzheimer’s, a person may function independently. He or she may still drive, work, and be part of social activities. Despite this, the person may feel as if he or she is having memory lapses, such as forgetting familiar words or the location of everyday objects. Symptoms may not be widely apparent at this stage, but family and close friends may take notice and a doctor would be able to identify symptoms using certain diagnostic tools.

Common difficulties include: coming up with the right word or name; remembering names when introduced to new people; having difficulty performing tasks in social or work settings; forgetting material that was just read; losing or misplacing a valuable object; or experiencing increased trouble with planning or organizing. During the early stage, it’s possible for people with a memory loss to live well by taking control of their health and wellness, and focusing their energy on aspects of their life that are most meaningful to them.

PSRC has an Early Stage Memory Support group that meets hybrid (in-person and on Zoom) the third Thursday of each month from 3:00 to 4/4:30 p.m. Not all memory loss is related to Alzheimer’s disease. This group supports any kind of memory loss (with or without a diagnosis). It is led by two compassionate women with extensive experience as caregivers and leaders in the field of aging.

Eileen E. Doremus is a certified social worker and current advocacy coordinator for the New Jersey Association of Area Agencies on Aging. She is the former executive director for the Mercer County Office on Aging, a founding Alzheimer’s Association Chapter volunteer and professional staff educator, and Alzheimer’s unit coordinator in a Central New Jersey nursing home. Both Eileen’s parents experienced dementia in their later years.

Geri H. Garfinkle, MSW, has personal experience with family and friends with dementia. Her grandmother, years ago, and now currently her brother-in-law and a childhood friend of sixty-three years. She has thirty years experience practicing as a clinical social worker/psychotherapist/family therapist and worked for ten years as a speech/language pathologist and audiologist at ICD International Center for the Disabled in New York.

Spotlight on
Silver Century Foundation

The Silver Century Foundation promotes a positive view of aging. The foundation challenges entrenched and harmful stereotypes, encourages dialogue between generations, advocates planning for the second half of life, and raises awareness to educate and inspire everyone to live long, healthy, empowered lives.

The foundation's free website publication silverycentury.org provides a trusted source of journalism about our older years. We challenge people to really think about a subject most of us would rather ignore, because when we defy stereotypes and dispute assumptions, we can welcome—dare we say, celebrate—all aspects of growing older and, therefore, enjoy happier, fuller, longer lives.

By sharing information and experiences through our website, Silver Century strives to help people of all ages understand the myriad interests and concerns that affect us as we grow older. Issues run the gamut from physical and mental health to financial security to life passions and pursuits.

Through its grantmaking the Silver Century Foundation also helps institutions such as the Kaiser Health News (KHN) and the Gerontological Society of America develop articles on longevity and related health and social issues.

Our website blog features the voices of various scholars, activists, and advocates who range in age and experience. Our arts section offers curated selections of books and films that provide positive age perspectives rather than ageist stereotypes, and our quizzes help visitors challenge their own knowledge of aging and to identify truth from fiction.

The foundation hopes you will join PSRC in using its website publication as an enjoyable and informative resource to assist you in experiencing life to the fullest.
